Mayor Jon-Jon Ferrer hails inauguration of cancer care center at private hospital

Daffodil Principle

EDUCATOR'S BOOTH

Dr. Arturo C. Pineda, PhD

combats procrastination and ningas cogon syndrome for a successful life

Part of two parts

Procrastination or malaga habit and ningas cogon syndrome are well-known characteristics that our Filipinos have inherited from our ancestors. These Filipino habits could be considered as detrimental to one's progress or development, especially in the work area, not only for professionals but also for students.

By the way, what is procrastination? What is the malaga syndrome? What is the Daffodil Principle? And how could the Daffodil experience reverse the character of oneself or a community?

What is a Procrastinator?

Procrastination is used to describe how a person or an individual is prone to delay in taking action or waiting for something before doing what is supposed to be done, especially performed as soon as possible.

My answer to the "Daffodil Principle" made me aware of the shift toward the doing that time is gold.

By giving importance to the scarce time available to oneself, it is an exact opposite of procrastinating.

Yes, by procrastinating, golden opportunities are actually being lost, and someone could cause harm to someone when decides to something at a later date.

In fact, as Dr. Peter Dinklage said, "Procrastination is one of the common and devastating habits that inhibit success and happiness."

What is the Ningas Cogon Syndrome?

Ningas cogon is a syndrome where someone is slow to start a new venture or task with little or no such enthusiasm and effort but after someone will lose a push or will suddenly stop working and with time that the interest of such individual is that particular venture or task will be totally stalled.

This is the coin reverse of the coin. But even for certain target milestone, it could be accomplished by exerting 25 percent of the effort to achieve 100 percent of the expected outcome.

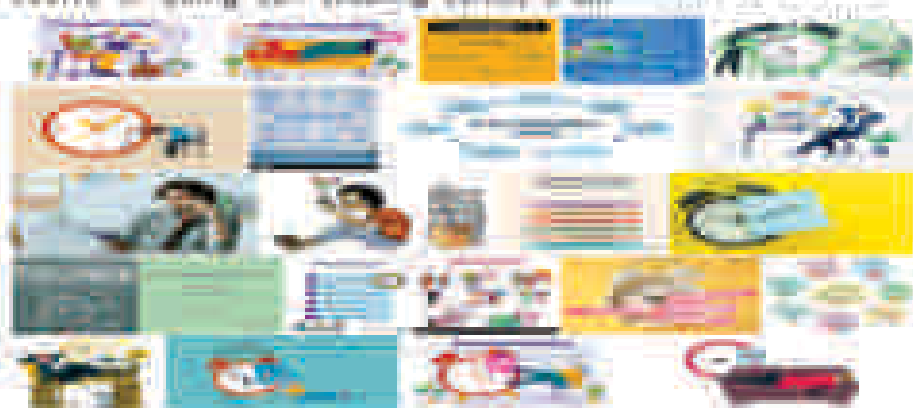

The efficiency and effectiveness would be greater if we had the right attitude, starting from our hearts in doing so.

Remember, planning 50 percent of the time and efforts that will be devoted to getting a particular task or affairs shall be enough to achieve an excellent performance. Of course, planning is a crucial and fundamental technique.

On these grounds, every semester, in my teaching career, I am showing my students about the Daffodil Principle with matching photos to my students being active under my tutelage at the College of Management, Management and Development Studies (COMADS), Cavite State University (CSU) in Indang, Cavite.
